The building is two stories high with a flat roof and common bond building and foundation walls. The first story facade is punctuated by a centered metal and glass ticket booth that projects from the building facade. To either side of the ticket booth is a set of flat plate glass double doors. Each door carries two lights. The doors are surmounted by a continuous aluminum lintel that is continuous to the flat ticket booth. A flat triple light plate glass transom surmounts the door and ticket booth configuration and follows the length of the lintel. To either side of the doors is a section of the painted building wall. Visual separation of the first and three bay wide second story facade is emphasized by the plastic and metal sign that spans the facade between the two stories. The center bay of the second story facade is punctuated by two boarded, full arched apertures with full arched brick lintels and stone sills. Either bay flanking the center bay is punctuated by a half arched brick lintel and stone sill. A parapet wall with three brick recessed panels surmounts the building facade. The tripartite painted wood cornice is embellished with four ball finials.
